Who could predict a winner with "professionals" like these?

Proudly We Dedicate

To you, Mr. Beryl D. Hensel, the 1951 "Monrovia." By being friendly, understanding and always willing to help, you have been as a model to us this year.

As you have worked hard during the first year of your return to your Alma Mater as superintendent, the first alumnus ever to do so, we have appreciated your efforts. In promoting class activities, encouraging our leadership and advising us for the future, you have shown strength of character and high ideals. For all of these, we are grateful.

Capable senior officers Norris, president; Steiner, treasurer; Herrmann, secretary; and Schaar, vice-president, preside over one of those innumerable class meetings.

Presenting The Class of 1951

"The most consummately beautiful thing in the universe is the rightly fashioned life of a good person."—George Herbert Palmer

Our twelve years of school have been for a definite purpose. In those years our teachers have sought out our interests and talents and have endeavored to help us develop them in such a way that our lives would be molded into useful ones.

For some of the Seniors there will be college or other advanced education; for others, there will be military service; for each one, there will be a life to be lived as nobly, as richly, as forcefully for good as each desires. We feel now and can safely predict that the future will prove our present idea that the knowledge and wisdom passed on to us by our teachers have been important inspirations in the fashioning of our lives.

Focus On Leaders of Tomorrow

In the midst of a constant whirl of activities, money making projects, and special events, we find the students working diligently on their studies. The road to graduation is long and entails struggling through such obstacles as history, algebra and physics. For all underclassmen there is the glorious consolation that someday they, too, will be Seniors.

Of course, along with all the hard work there is also an abundance of fun. Amusing incidents that brighten any class, the crowds in the hall and casual chatter between bells, the exhilarating competition in gym classes, the growing friendships that develop through the years—all add variety and distract from the general routine. Really, school is enjoyable, sparkling with interest, and valuable.

Accent On The Beauty In Life

We appreciate, too, the finer things of life, such as music, art, and dramatics. Our students of music, whether they are interested in it as a hobby or as a preparation for life work, have given much of their time and energy for the purpose of producing good musical groups.

Art as a means of expressing one's creative interests is fascinating to some of our students. In craft work and on paper, through color, design, and originality, they have learned to describe their emotions, and reactions.

Among the annual activities anticipated by people of the community are the class plays. The students, too, look forward to the fun at rehearsals, the last minute rush to learn lines, the inevitable lack of at least one important property, the commotion caused by the quick changing of costumes on the night of presentation, and the embarrassing moments when the telephone forgets to ring. However, behind all this is a desire to excel in presenting a really good play and the classes at Monroe have produced many of which they can be proud.

Encouraging A Spirit of Friendship

The support of the community is very important to the welfare of a school. A clear, ever-increasing understanding between the two can result in a pleasant, alert public which cherishes and wants to build its school for its inherent worth, and in a school which respects and appreciates the support of a loyal community.

To promote friendly public relations, the "Wildcat Tales" and the "Monrovia" have been published, assemblies have been held to encourage student thinking along adult lines, music and dramatic groups have performed for public enjoyment, and many social events have been planned to bring the people of the community into a grateful school, which is reaching out to them with the sincere hand of friendship.

Homecoming

Wanda Robert, a junior, was elected by the four upper grades to preside over the first Homecoming festivities held at Monroe School. Her attendants were Charlene Schlotterbeck, Janie Schaar, Nancy Steiner, seniors, and Jo Ann Martin, sophomore, who, because of illness, was unable to be present. Don Lucas and Bob Garber, co-captains for the evening, were chosen to crown the queen and present her with her bouquet.

Mr. E. Schwinn provokes some serious thinking.

Discussing a problem which has been brought before them, are Student Council advisor Mr. Warner and members Cabaniss, Robert, Sell, Jenkins, vice-president, Denlinger, president, Grant, Mettert, treasurer, Reeder, secretary, Wright, and Denlinger.

Cheer up! The magic man is here.

With this feather, I thee wed.

Proudly they bear our flags.

Emphasis On Practical Knowledge

While schools of many years ago taught only readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic, modern educators have a tendency to teach more practical knowledge as a preparation for life work.

Home economics, agriculture, and other practical arts, which were once taught in the home, are now offered in schools where the most modern methods of homemaking, farming and driving are taught by people who specialize in those fields. Through every available opportunity, we are learning how to live in the economic world of today, where individual thinking, planning and effort can result in the success that everyone of us hopes for in his future.

Spotlight On Sports Events

Sports play an important part in our lives as they do in those of students of nearly every school.

Basketball is the outstanding sport at Monroe, with baseball running a close second and track not far behind.

All of our various teams have set their goals high and have worked hard to attain them. Often the going has been difficult and there have been temporary setbacks, but success begins with the will, the spirit of a team to win. In admirable fashion, our Monroe "Wildcats" have exhibited this quality of wanting to play on and on; and with the skill and teamwork which result from sincere efforts, they have earned honors for themselves and for their school. As students we all have prided ourselves on sportsmanship and have tried to live by the philosophy that "How you win or lose is more important than whether you win or lose."

Highlighting The Fun We've Had

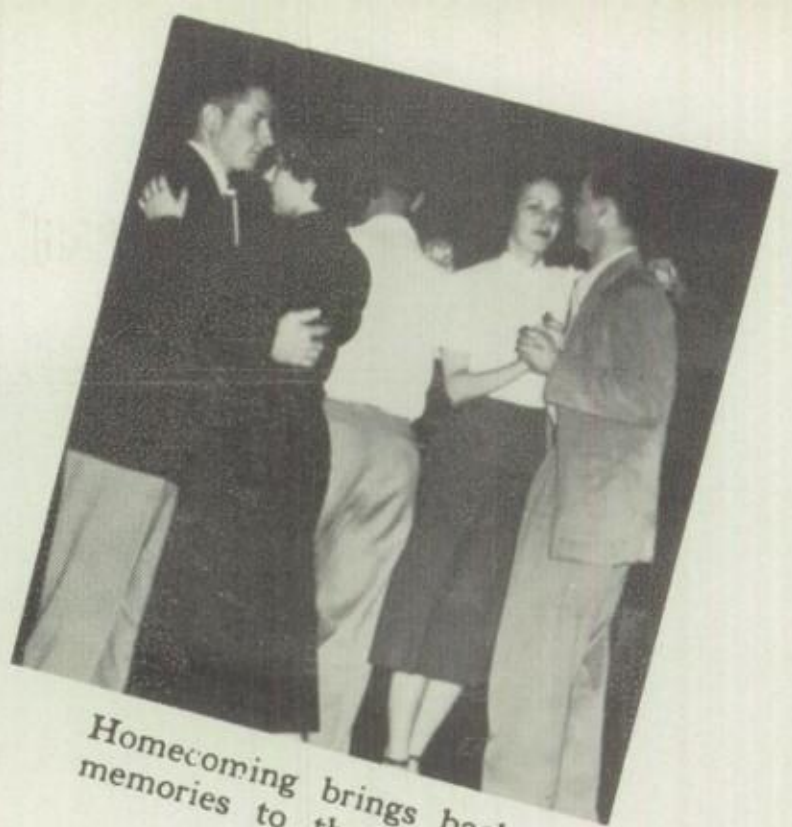

Events longest to be remembered about one's high school days will probably be our parties, ball games, dates with the crowd—or with that special person—receptions, practical jokes, embarrassing moments, vacations, after school work on "Wildcat Tales" and the "Monrovia" and all the downright silliness that only high school students can create.

Of course, we'll remember the hard work, too, that accompanied all of our class projects through the years, but we won't think of it as such because it has been fun. We've worked, lived, and played together, and most important of all, we've enjoyed doing it.

Did you say this was a girls' slumber party?

Homecoming brings back memories to the alumni.

Yummy! Reifreshment time at the junior party.

"Get out of here with that . . ."

Is resting all you girls ever do?

Having fun, boys?

Did you ever find that golf ball, Mr. Hensel?

Harold poses good-naturedly for this threatening picture.

Just A Word . . .

"It's all over now." Another year has passed, and the 1951 "Monrovia" has gone into final production. Everything has slowed down—the clicking of typewriters, the ringing of the telephone, the scurrying around to snap pictures at just the right moment. The newspaper room, usually alive with students rushing in and out, pasting up dummy copies, chattering as they work, racking their brains for the exact word or idea, has a rare quietness now. The very atmosphere seems to be meditating on the 1951 "Monrovia," a book with a style all its own, result of the combined efforts, skill, and personality of all those who have helped create it.

In reviewing this year's activities, we, as co-editors, recall a host of co-workers who helped to make our annual what it is. Our eternal thanks go to all the senior class members for their time and energy used in producing this book. Especially are we grateful to our efficient photographers, Ada Gilley and Carolyn Baker; to Nancy Steiner, for designing our cover and lending many artistic touches; to Ione Sell, who wrote our literary continuity so diligently and cleverly; to Jim Statzer, Don Lucas, Elwood Norris and Dick Hurd for their successful advertising campaign.

Our appreciation is sincerely due, too, to those behind the scenes: to the faculty for their patience and cooperation during our necessary interruptions; to all our friends who purchased subscriptions and advertisements; to our parents for their kind and willing help with all of our class projects; to Mr. Howard Knoll and Mr. Roy Wise for their splendid photographs; and to the Hamilton Printing Company for their services.

We wish to express special gratitude to our principal and class advisor, Miss Elizabeth Giedeman, who gave her time and efforts wholeheartedly to help us along.

It has been a real privilege and wonderful experience to work with everyone this year and it is with sincere regret that we realize that "it's all over now."
